LISA SERGIO

. . . internationally known as the golden voice of Rome . . . having begun her career in Italy as Europe's first woman radio commentator . . . who left Rome in disagreement with the Fascist philosophy . . . who was the first person ever to refer to the Rome-Berlin Axis . . . who is now one of Fascism's uncompromising critics in the United States . . . who is known and respected by millions of women, has been selected by Botany Worsted Mills to broadcast for them on the Blue Network in a program entitled Botany's "One Woman's Opinion." This program will be heard on all Blue Network stations available, on every Monday, at 10:45 A.M. Eastern War Time.

☆

Lisa Sergio was born Elisa Sergio in Florence, Italy, March 17, 1905. Baron Agostino Sergio, her father, an Italian nobleman who died in 1915, came of a Naples family that had long supported the cause of Italian independence; despite some Scotch blood he traced his descent to the Roman house of the Sergii, in whose honor an arch had been erected at Pola on the Adriatic some 2,000 years ago. The other half of her ancestry is thoroughly American; there is a treasured gold cup in the family presented by Lafayette on his second visit to Virginia in recognition of the hospitality accorded him by one of her ancestors. Her mother, the former Margaret Fitzgerald was socially prominent in Baltimore, Maryland.

☆

While Miss Sergio as a child had so little formal education that she does not possess even the equivalent of a grade school certificate, through private tutoring, traveling about Europe, and being simply wide awake and receptive, she acquired a more comprehensive liberal arts education than many holders of B.A. degrees today can boast. At an early age she had mastered English, French and Italian and found her way around in Spanish and German. From the first her chief interest lay in antiquities and art. At fifteen she was unaccountably intrigued by Bible studies and the theatre; she translated a well known French play into Italian and then had the thrill of seeing it produced. She also took courses at the University of Florence that were of a cultural nature.

☆

We know you will be interested in what Miss Sergio will have to say about national and international affairs. She will express her opinion sincerely and boldly and will tell American women how she thinks they can be most helpful in keeping America the way we all want it to be.

☆

Check your opinion with Lisa Sergio's opinion. You may not always agree with what she thinks but you will find her intelligent and helpful. We are particularly eager to have Botany Model of the Month Club members write to Miss Sergio or to us expressing their opinion of Botany's "One Woman's Opinion." Check your local Blue Network station for the time Miss Sergio may be heard in your city.
